Inspired by Hope

As we begin this New Year, we are energized by the alliances that we have built and the opportunities to work together to bring positive changes to our community.

We were thrilled to partner with Futuro Media Group, Three Rivers Community College, Eastern CT State University and New London Public Schools to provide a unique and exciting learning experience for students in Eastern Connecticut. Hundreds of students and community members packed halls to participate in conversations on topics that were close to their hearts.

Our Women & Girls Funds Task Force on Public Policy is continuing to hold listening sessions and advocacy trainings to deepen our outreach into the community. We are building the capacity of our nonprofits to do more to address system change. And, we are partnering with other civic-minded organizations and providing grant monies to ensure that all in our communities participate in the 2020 Census.

The way forward is filled with hope... and hope is what inspires us daily to advocate and work for the rights of all who reside in Eastern Connecticut.

We need you at our table. Please join us.

Broadcasting Youth Voices

A leading journalist, area colleges and podcasting empower local students.

Three Rivers Community College and Eastern Connecticut State University were the “incubators” last fall for students to develop effective communication skills through podcasting, and lively community discussion around the important topics of addiction/mental health and immigration, respectively.

The students - who would not otherwise have had access to these unique learning experiences - learned from one of the leading journalists in the country, Maria Hinojosa, and her team at Futuro Media Group (FMG), which produces multimedia content from a person of color perspective to educate, enlighten and empower people to navigate the complexities of an increasingly diverse and connected world. Evening community discussions of the topics were held in each location and taped for Maria Hinojosa’s In The Thick show.

The Community Foundation, along with our funding partners, the William Caspar Graustein Memorial Fund and the Perrin Family Foundation, share a commitment to empowering youth and advancing equity. Together we will present a third opportunity for students to amplify their voices around racism and discrimination at a March 25th event at the Science & Technology Magnet High School of Southeastern CT in New London. The podcasting workshop will be offered to New London High School students, while the live taping of In The Thick is open to the public and begins at 6 pm.

“Having award-winning journalists and the national podcast, In the Thick, air live at Three Rivers Community College allowed for a very timely, rich, and honest discussion about the overdose crisis that is impacting our students, our communities, our lives. The workshop held prior to the podcast was also a highlight, broadening our students’ understanding and experience with the power of podcasts. We thank the Community Foundation of Eastern Connecticut for making this event possible. We hope that through this dialogue we were able to educate, remove barriers to seeking help, and eliminate misconceptions about the overdose crisis.”

Census 2020: Ensuring a Complete Count to Help Eastern CT Thrive

Chances are you’ve heard about how important a “complete count” is for the 2020 Census.

Your Community Foundation is working hard to ensure that all residents of our region are counted so that Eastern Connecticut gets its accurate share of the hundreds of billions of dollars in federal funding that will flow into U.S. communities every year for the next decade. Connecticut currently receives $11 billion in federal funding, based on the last census.

The stakes are high. For every person in Connecticut not counted, an estimated $2,900 will be lost. An undercount would have significant impacts on education, health and public works that affect us all.

We know you share our concern about how an incomplete count would have a devastating impact on our local safety net, including programs such as Head Start, Medicaid, nutrition assistance (SNAP) and other vital services. The Community Foundation has signed on with the Census 2020 as part of a Complete Count Committee to encourage and support efforts to count hard-to-reach communities in our region.

Although confidentiality in the process is federally protected, some communities remain wary of participation. We seek to empower trusted community partners and those who speak the language of a given community to help build trust and make the process as inclusive as possible.

In addition to connecting community organizations that are working to get a complete count for Census 2020, we have created a small grants program to support outreach efforts. For more information or to apply, please contact Jennifer O’Brien at JennOB@cfct.org or 860.442.3572.

Nonprofit Leadership Needs All Voices

Diversity, Equity, Inclusion Cohort: From Learning to Action

After 160 representatives from nonprofits attended two local workshops designed to increase diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) across their organizations’ leadership, mission and daily work, we knew that we had tapped into an important need. Embracing and promoting equity will better serve everyone across our region and help to reduce the racism and intolerance that impacts our most vulnerable neighbors on a daily basis.

The Community Foundation itself is building upon its core values of equity and justice with Board and staff immersed in reading, workshops, discussions with experts, and other learning opportunities with the intent of applying a greater equity and justice lens to our operations, grantmaking, fundraising and community leadership. As we move forward, we will invite our fundholders and other stakeholders to continue on this listening and learning journey with us.

With the expertise of Jamal Jimerson and his team at the Minority Inclusion Project (www.ctmip.org), we responded to our nonprofit partners’ desire to extend and deepen their learning on equity by supporting a six-month DEI cohort of four organizations in 2019: New England Science & Sailing (NESS), LaGrua Center, Southeastern Connecticut Cultural Coalition and the Connecticut Audubon Society.

Next up in 2020 is a collaboration with other area funders on new DEI offerings, with an eye toward helping to develop the next generation of board members and volunteers to advise policy and practice at local organizations.

“In the 120 years since we began as an organization, we haven’t diversified like our state has. We reach over 15,000 students every year and a majority of them are from marginalized communities. Yet, when these students look at our educators, they do not see anyone that looks like them. Our efforts to have these students become the next generation of conservationists relies on our ability to evolve to a more diverse, equitable and inclusive organization. It’s crucial for our sustainability and vision for impact.”

– Patrick Comins, Executive Director Connecticut Audubon Society
Unleashing the Powerful Potential of Your IRA

“It’s such an easy way to create a legacy for the organizations I care about!”

These were the words of Laurel Butler when she had an “aha” moment during her tenure as chair of the Community Foundation’s Board of Trustees in 2008-2009. As a busy financial advisor and volunteer with a spouse and children, Laurel realized the importance of planning for “when I’m no longer here.” She wanted to include the community she calls home, but also had to focus on taking care of her family. Laurel reasoned she could do that and still leave something for the organizations in whose missions she strongly believes. “I wanted the work they do to make our community thrive to be part of my legacy,” said Laurel. And so, she included those organizations as partial beneficiaries for her Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

Fast forward a decade to another “aha” moment: When reviewing her legacy giving plans, Laurel decided to create a single repository for her IRA partial beneficiary designation and include all of her charitable priorities in one endowed field of interest fund at the Community Foundation. The Butler Daniels Fund will support five area nonprofit organizations in perpetuity.

At a time “very far off from now,” this new plan will simplify the distribution process from her IRA, create a favorable tax situation for her heirs, and put into place annual grant distributions to five organizations whose important work addresses the educational and spiritual needs, as well as overall quality of life, of residents of our region.

Gifts That Work For You

The Charitable IRA Rollover (qualified charitable distribution or QCD) could be a wonderful opportunity for you to make a lasting impact on the charitable causes you love through a fund at the Community Foundation.

It allows individuals age 70½ and older to make direct transfers of up to $100,000 per year from individual retirement accounts to qualified charities without having to count the transfers as income for federal tax purposes. Since no tax is incurred on the withdrawal, gifts do not qualify for a charitable deduction, but may be counted toward an individual’s required minimum distribution (RMD*).

*If you reach age 70½ in 2020 or later you must take your first RMD by April 1 of the year after you reach 72. If you reached the age of 70½ before January 1, 2020, the prior rule of 70½ as the age requirement for RMDs still applies.

Scholarship Donors Help Open Doors

Every day, we work with donors and nonprofits to help students—regardless of race, ethnicity, or zip code—afford post-secondary education and training.

Be inspired by these three scholarship recipients who are sure to make their mark on the world, thanks in part to the generous donors behind their Community Foundation scholarships.

“I have always enjoyed being able to help other people, which is why I plan to pursue a career in the healthcare field. I also hope to be able to help underrepresented communities and empower them to learn more about their health. Thanks to the Chalecki Scholarship, I am one step closer to those goals. The financial assistance that it has provided will be of great help in paying my educational expenses at the University of Connecticut, and it will allow me to concentrate more of my time for studying.”

“I am a single mom and full-time student in the Rhode Island College School of Nursing. RICSON’s courses are preparing me to graduate with a baccalaureate degree, take the NCLEX-RN exam, and have the foundation for pursuing a graduate degree. The Serafín Scholarship has reduced the financial burden and stress associated with work overload. I’m focused on my passion for all things nursing and am looking forward to beginning a new and rewarding career.”

Eastern CT Mentoring Collaborative (ECMC) Celebrates Mentors and Mentees

The ECMC is a key vehicle for the Community Foundation to promote mentoring as a means of empowering young people.

At its second annual awards ceremony in January, the ECMC presented the Outstanding Mentor Award to Holly Butler, a mental health worker at Natchaug Hospital’s Joshua Center adolescent day treatment program in Groton. The Outstanding Mentor Champion Award was given to LifeFAQs.org, a New London-based nonprofit that brings volunteer mentors into schools in New London, Norwich and elsewhere to connect caring adults with students who need them.

“In the 13 years between my second and third years of college, I lived and worked all over the US and Europe. I learned that our world sits at a tipping point, and it was time to act for our future. I moved back to Connecticut to major in Environmental Earth Science and Sustainable Energy Studies at Eastern Connecticut State University. My career goal is to help implement renewable energy projects domestically and abroad.”
